The renowned contemporary artist Carol Brown Goldberg, who draws her inspiration from physics, will exhibit her abstract paintings at the Suzanne H. Arnold Art Gallery at Lebanon Valley College early in 2010. Carol Brown Goldberg: Aura and the Implicate Order will be on display from Jan. 15 through Feb. 21. Goldberg's works explore the relationship between color, shape, movement, and space. Comprised of grids of colored circles, her large canvases draw the viewer's eye through and beyond the rhythm of the receding circles.

"Physics is inspiration, my muse," she writes on her website. "Quantum particles of hadrons, mesons, bosons, and fermions, anthropomorphized by me, dance across the cosmic space of my canvas." Her broad spectrums of colors, executed in acrylic, are intensified by the pulverized glass that Goldberg adds to her pigments, creating an effect that she compares to the twinkling cosmos at night. The exhibition will include a series of these large canvases, as well as a number of works on handmade paper. A selection of Goldberg's small bronze abstract sculptures will also be on display for the first time.

In conjunction with Goldberg's exhibition, Donald Kuspit, renowned art critic and Distinguished Professor of Art History and Philosophy, State University of New York at Stony Brook, will present the lecture Mystical Physics: Carol Brown Goldberg's Paintings, on Monday, Feb. 1, at 7 p.m. in Zimmerman Recital Hall at Lebanon Valley College. The lecture is free and open to the public, with limited seating available.

Goldberg, who is based Bethesda, Md., exhibits her works nationally and internationally. She recently had solo exhibitions at the National Arts Club, New York; the Katzen Arts Center, American University; Casa de Vacas of Madrid; the Gabarrón Foundation Museum of Valladolid; and other locations in Spain. She is currently exhibiting her work at the Centro de las Artes III in Monterrey, Mexico. Goldberg's paintings are in many prominent collections, including the National
